Secondly, CAMB Nation is a family-oriented indigenous community who wishes to be inclusive. You will notice that we have both Native and non-Native membership applications. We extend an invitation to every Native family unit who has non-Native relatives, such as spouses and adopted or non-Native children, to also be incorporated into our community. The only difference will be, their tribal enrollment identification cards will state that they are non-Native, because we use the federal standard of Native

We have annual ID renewal periods; all CAMB Nation ID cards expire on October 31 the following year. The period for requesting renewal and paying the fee is between AUGUST 1st and OCTOBER 1st. During that period, you may email to request a new card and pay your fee and we will process that and mail out your new card before the expiration date. But please keep in mind we will be very busy later so the sooner you make your request and pay the fee, the faster we can send out your new card to you.

Renewal of an EXPIRED ID Card may incur a 30$ late fee and delays in receiving your renewed ID card because our period for renewals will have already ended and we will have moved on to other tribal affairs. If you choose NOT to renew your Tribal ID Card and are an Inactive member of the community, you will be automatically dis-enrolled and removed from tribal communications and we wish you well and no hard feelings. However, if you come back after a long period of time wishing to rejoin the community, we may or may not consider your request. CAMB NATION ENROLLMENT FAQ'S

If you have any other questions aside from the ones listed below, please email us: enrollment@cambnation.org

Q: Do I still need to apply if someone else in my family already has applied and provided a family ancestry chart and DNA test results?

A: Yes, but you do not need to provide the DNA test results or family chart, so long that you still meet the standard indigenous blood percentage requirement of 25% or higher.

Q: If I am non-Native, am I still allowed to apply for enrollment in CAMB Nation?

A: Yes, you can still apply. CAMB Nation does not want to break up families of mixed heritage. Therefore, we extend the invitation for enrollment to Native families who may have non-Native members living with them, such as non-Native spouses, adopted children or other non-Native individuals who are integral to the family unit. This means the Native family member or members must still meet the minimum blood percentage requirement of 25% Native DNA marker. The only difference in your membership will be that your application for enrollment and issued Tribal ID Card (if accepted by tribal leadership) will state "Non-Native Member" so as to authentically include you in our tribal community and allow you to contribute to our culture and goals all the same as your Native family members. NOTE: Because CAMB Nation enrollment is limited, we are NOT currently accepting single non-Native applicants into the tribe, except as the Principal Tribal Chief decides on a case-by-case basis.

Q: If I decide to leave the tribe any time after being accepted for enrollment, will I be able to rejoin the tribe?

A: Possibly. Assuming your departure from the tribe is amicable, then the Principal Tribal Chief will review the reasons for your departure and make their decision. If you are invited to reapply for enrollment, you will have to go through the same application process as before (resubmit all documents and pay all fees). If you still have enrolled family members in the tribe, your application process may be expedited. NOTE: CAMB Nation may limit the number of enrolled members and may or may not open the enrollment process for extended periods of time. If enrollment is closed, it is likely that no applications will be accepted until further notice.

Q: Is there a place where I will be able to meet and connect with other members after being accepted?

A: Yes! CAMB Nation has adapted to a physical, digital, and communal presence. While most of our communications are in private online forums, we have members that meet up at all kinds of events and gatherings both privately and publicly, such as intertribal gatherings called Pow Wows. CAMB Nation is proud that we have enrolled members across 12 U.S. states and 4 states in Mexico, so our influence is wide-reaching. Tribal members post about announcements for local and regional opportunities to meet and represent the tribe.

Q: What do I need to do as an active member of CAMB Nation?

A: As explained in further detail in our 2023 Tribal Rules and Regulations Agreement (TRRA), each member is expected to contribute annually AT LEAST THREE (3) skills, talents, or things that add something of value, discovery, or interest to any of the various aspects of our tribal community and culture. This includes history, art, education, dance, prayer, communication, language, health, society, finances, community engagement/outreach, and many more. So long as you are able to provide those yearly contributions to our tribe and be able and willing to engage in conversation and collaboration with other tribal members, then you will be considered an active tribal member. Should an extensive period of inactivity occur, tribal leadership will reach out to determine the reasons and if they are acceptable. Please note that CAMB Nation prohibits enrollment for the sole purpose of attaining an ID Card and tribal status with no intention of contribution.
